

THE DAILY HERALD

Salt Lake City, - Utah.

SUNDAY, - JUNE 14, 1885.

TWELVE PAGES.

THE DAILY HERALD is published every morning, Mondays excepted, at the Herald Block, corner West Temple and First South streets, Salt Lake City, by THE HERALD PUBLISHING AND PRINTING COMPANY. Subscription price, $10.00 per annum, postage included; parts of the year at the same rate. To weekly subscribers, collections made by carriers 20 cents a week.

THE WEEKLY HERALD is published every Wednesday and Saturday morning, at $2.50 a year; six months, $1.25; postage included.

THE WEEKLY HERALD is published every Thursday morning at $2.00 a year; six months, $1.00, postage included.

Subscribers will confer a favor by forwarding information to this office when their papers are not duly delivered. This will greatly aid us in our efforts to determine where the fault lies.

All Mail Communications intended for this office should be addressed to THE HERALD, Salt Lake City, Utah, and not to individuals.

SHOULD BE REMOVED.

The disgraceful incident which occurred at the postoffice on Friday and was described in Saturday morning's HERALD, should be all that any administration ought to require to order the prompt removal of the postmaster. A man who will permit his passion to gain the mastery of him, to the extent that Mr. Lynch did on the occasion referred to is unfit to hold any office that brings him in contact with the public, and the postoffice, above all others is where he should not be. We have no doubt Mr. Lynch feels heartily ashamed of his conduct; he must feel that way if he has recovered control of his senses, and regained the use of his judgment. No provocation should be sufficient to induce an official, in his own office and in the presence of his subordinates, to indulge in the black-guard business of bandying hot words with a citizen, such as "liar," and when it comes to hurling missiles through windows and engaging in a fight, things are becoming positively disgraceful. In this instance there was unquestionably some provocation, and it was not confined to either side in the controversy, but there was nothing said or done that would have caused an ordinarily discreet and self-respecting person to indulge in the vulgarity and violence of which the postmaster was guilty. The affair of the money order was something of which neither Mr. Lynch nor Mr. Clayton ought to feel that he had shown ordinary care, or official or business prudence. No one will think of imputing improper motives to Mr. Clayton in the transaction, but when he comes to reflect upon his act he must see that he was unwise and negligent to the degree of recklessness in signing another man's name to a money order without being authorized to do so, and not knowing whence the money came or whether it was intended for him; and while this is true of the auditor, there can be no excuse for Mr. Lynch who knew, if he understood his duties at all, that he should not have paid the money to Mr. Clayton before ascertaining that the latter was the rightful holder of an order payable to another man. A duly careful postmaster would not have done this.

Of all officials the postmaster should be the most gentlemanly, accommodating and affable to the public, and at the same time the most upright, careful and correct in his business habits. In view of this money order transaction and the disgraceful proceeding of last Friday, and in the light of the fact that Mr. Lynch has taken a course while in the office to make himself decidedly unpopular in the community, the proper thing for the President would seem to be to promptly remove the postmaster.

DISCREDITING CONSCIENTIOUSNESS.

Some time ago many of the newspapers made a good deal of fun of an ex-soldier who had relinquished his pension on the score that the government had done enough for him. The fellow was undoubtedly honest and conscientious in the matter, but he was called a "fool," "an idiot" and other names implying that he was not right in his mind, the popular idea of clear-headedness and sanity consisting in getting all you can from government, whether or not you are entitled to it. Now comes a similar case, reported from Fishertown, Indian Territory. The postmaster of that town, having read the opinion of the Attorney-General, promptly forwarded his resignation, in his letter explaining that while his blood was not all Indian there was yet enough of Indian blood to establish his "Lo" origin. This conscientious postmaster is now being scored as an "ass" and a "fool," journalistic judgment pronounced upon him being that he should have held on and compelled the powers that be to remove him. Honesty and conscientiousness are so rarely found in the public service that they should not be discouraged and made light of when encountered. If a person is to be denounced as an idiot or fool for doing what he conceives to be right and what is right, fewer men will have the courage to face the world with upright action.

THE RECEIVERSHIP.

It now transpires that Mr. Hugh C. Wallace was really appointed to the receivership of the Salt Lake land office last Monday, his name appearing in a list of thirty or forty others appointed on the day mentioned, and published in the eastern papers. The day following the question of Mr. Wallace's place of residence came up, and parties in this city were asked by wire from Washington if the gentleman were a bona fide resident. As these were necessarily answered in the negative, Mr. Wallace being in no sense a citizen of this Territory, if he has ever been within its boundary longer than a day or two at a time, it is presumed an effort is being made by the applicants for the office to have the appointment recalled. Whether or not they will be successful remains to be seen. The office is regarded as among the best in the Territory, though it is not legitimately worth $5,000 a year, as stated in a Washington telegram to the St. Louis Globe Democrat, reprinted in Saturday's issue of THE HERALD.

RESTRAINT BEYOND REASON.

In Massachusetts there is a law requiring applicants for promotion in the civil service to undergo an examination similar to that provided by the United States Civil Service Act. It is found that the law bars some ex-soldiers from places in which they might earn their living, and to this extent the act is objectionable to the pronounced and still growing sentiment in favor of rewarding as many as possible of the soldiers of the late war with soft situations. To overcome this difficulty a bill has been introduced in the Legislature for exempting ex-Union soldiers from the Civil Service examinations. This bill ought to strike the law-makers as carrying the noble sentiment of patriotic gratitude a little too far for the good of the State. Clerkships and places of trust and emolument are not created for the purpose of conferring them on individuals; that is to say, Massachusetts nor any other State, rewards any class of persons by paying them for doing nothing. If the State wants service at all it wants good service, and it pays for that service, not giving the money to the employee because of any desire it has to reward him. The civil service rules of the State, like those of the general government were undoubtedly devised for the purpose of getting the best service for the money, and to avoid the evils of favoritism; as it is what they do, rather than what they are for which they are paid, the employees should all be subjected to the same rules and tests. It should also occur to the late soldiers that the proposed law is a reflection on their intelligence, capacity and education, in that it says they are not equal intellectually and otherwise to their fellows who were not in the army; in other words, that the inferior and uneducated men went into the war, while the superior and educated stayed at home.

The intelligent, reasonable and really patriotic sentiment of the day is that, everything else being equal, in distributing the offices and easy positions in the public service, the preference be given to the men who have fought for and saved the Union. This is going far enough; going beyond it would be too far. The country can do what more it wants to for the soldiers in the way of bounties and pensions.

It is most fortunate for the Federal judges in Utah that the ablest jurists and best learned lawyers of the Territory are editing newspapers. The ordinary lawyers—those who hang out their shingles and practice their profession for a living—can go through the formality of presenting their arguments in court, but the journalistic attorney will make it unnecessary for the judges to listen to or remember what is said at the bar, by concisely and emphatically stating the law, and indicating what the decision should be in a half column editorial, that their honors may read at their leisure. The lawyer editor does not always get the decision his way, but the failure is through no fault or neglect of his, for he tells the courts in time, just what their opinion should be.

ONE SANDERSON, late postmaster of Clarksville, Texas, is almost good enough to be a Democrat. In sending in his resignation the other day, he explained: "I wish to engage in other business, and while I am a Republican, although not of the offensive partisan kind, I believe that to the victor belong the spoils, and I do not wish to stand in the way of this people being served by one of their own political faith."

At the Baptist Church To-day. To-day is "Children's Day" in the Baptist denomination throughout the United States, and will be observed in the Baptist Church here this morning, beginning at 11 o'clock. The church will be beautifully decorated with flowers, numbers of live birds, etc. The exercises will be under the direction of the Sabbath School, consisting of responsive reading, recitations, singing and an address by the acting pastor, Rev. M. T. Lamb. To-night, at 8 o'clock, a valuable and interesting historical lecture is announced, designed to show how we know that the Bible as we now have it is the same, as to its books and contents, as when it was first given to the world, with a brief criticism of Aqueduct Orson Pratt's attack upon the Bible. The public are invited.
